

A Study of the Principles Governing Administrative Organizations in the Iranian Legal System

Kazemi A.,¹ Barzegar A.B*,² Hosseini Sadrabadi I.³

Abstract:

Introduction: Administrative organizations include a complex set which includes a number of legal entities that have a variety of characteristics. The government is not only a political entity, and it is subject to the study of fundamental rights, but also at the head of administrative organizations. the functions and limits of the authority of the supreme administrative authority, which are at the head of office organizations, is subject to the study of the fundamental rights, in administrative law, the administration under the government complex as executive branch and administrative duties of administrative officials. the relationship between government and administrative bodies is based on the government's set and other specialized agencies based on the basics of legal and technical work and, for ease of study, the principles governing administrative organizations are studied.

Methods: This study is collected through field and library studies

Conclusion: The results we can point to is that the most important principles governing the administrative organizations, the principles of legitimacy, the principle of the administrative hierarchy, the principle of the legal personality of administrative organizations, the establishment and organizing of office machines and technical principles, include administrative focus.

Key words: Iran, governing, organization, principles

Citation: Kazemi A., Barzegar A.B*, Hosseini Sadrabadi I. A Study of the Principles Governing Administrative Organizations in the Iranian Legal System, Family and health, 2022;12(1): 160-171

¹ - PHD Candidate of General Law, Maybod Branch, Islamic Azad University, Maybod, Iran.

² - Department of Public Law, Maybod Branch, Islamic Azad University, Maybod, Iran,
Responsible Author. Corresponding Author: reza.barzegar52@gmail.com

³ - Department of Law, Tehran, University of Judicial Sciences and Administrative Services, Tehran, Iran.