

Study of the Relationship between (Active) Values in action with hope in specific areas and outcome expectations master in students

Tanaomi F¹., Khanbani M^{2*}.

Abstract

Introduction: The purpose of this study was to determine the relationship between (Active) Values in action (VIA) with hope in specific areas and outcome expectations master of students in clinical psychology.

Methods: The research method was descriptive and correlation. The Statistical Society of this study consisted of all students of Tehran-Shomal Islamic Azad University in the 2015-16 academic year. Among them, 230 students were selected by available sampling. Tools of this study were active Values in action, hope in a specific area (Simpson 1991) and outcome expectations Questionnaires. Pearson correlation and Regression analyze was used.

Results: There is a significant positive correlation between (active values) in practice with hope in certain fields and expectations of the students of the Faculty of Clinical Psychology.

Conclusion: Increasing and raising the level of character capabilities creates a cognitive, emotional and motivational state in individuals towards the future.

Key words: active values in action (VIA), hope in specific arena and outcome Expectations student

Citation: Tanaomi F., Khanbani M. Study of the Relationship between (Active) Values in action with hope in specific areas and outcome expectations master in students, Family and health, 2019, 9(3): 76-87

¹ - Clinical Psychology, Azad University of Science and Research, Tehran.

² - PhD in Clinical Psychology, Faculty Member of Azad University of Science and Technology, Tehran (responsible author). Email:f.tanaomi@yahoo.com